Practice questions

In this booklet, there are different types of question for you to answer in different ways. Here are some practice questions which show you the types of question you will see in the test. The instructions tell you what you need to do. Start by reading the text in the box below.

Bryn and Sara eagerly packed their rucksacks for the final day of their castle exploration trip – today they would visit Castell y Bere. Bryn had marked on the map which castle they had investigated each day and Sara had been photographing and recording the plants that lived there. Dolbadarn Castle on the first day had been their favourite, but the views at Deganwy on the third day had been amazing!

Bryn slotted the neatly folded maps between the compass and the first aid kit in his bag, while Sara crammed her stripy hat between the camera and half-eaten packet of soggy biscuits.

A

What did Sara have in her bag?

Tick three.

- maps
- compass
- hat
- biscuits
- first aid kit
- camera

Hint: Check how many you have to tick.

Underline one word that tells you that they were excited about their trip.

Bryn and Sara eagerly packed their rucksacks for the final day of their castle exploration trip – today they would visit Castell y Bere.

Hint: Check how many words to underline.

Hint: If you make a mistake and want to change your answer, then write your new answer out underneath, instead.

C

Find and copy two things that Bryn had in his bag.

STOP

Please wait until you are told to start work on page 4.

In this booklet, you have three texts to read and answer questions about. Read the first text carefully before you start answering the questions for that text. Then carefully read the next text before answering the questions and so on.

You should work through the booklet until you finish page 15 or until you are asked to stop, referring to the text when you need to.

You have up to 60 minutes to do the test.
White Fang

The cub came upon it suddenly. It was his own fault. He had been careless. He had left the cave and run down to the stream to drink. It might have been that he took no notice because he was heavy with sleep. (He had been out all night on the meat trail, and had but just then awakened.) And his carelessness might have been due to the familiarity of the trail to the pool. He had travelled it often, and nothing had ever happened on it.

He went down past the blasted pine, crossed the open space, and trotted in amongst the trees. Then, at the same instant, he saw and smelled. Before him, sitting silently on their haunches, were five live things, the like of which he had never seen before. It was his first glimpse of mankind. But at the sight of him the five men did not spring to their feet, nor show their teeth, nor snarl. They did not move but sat there, silent and ominous.

Nor did the cub move. Every instinct of his nature would have impelled him to dash wildly away, had there not suddenly and for the first time arisen in him another and counter instinct. A great awe descended upon him. He was beaten down to movelessness by an overwhelming sense of his own weakness and littleness. Here was mastery and power, something far and away beyond him.

The cub had never seen man, yet the instinct concerning man was his. In dim ways he recognised in man the animal that had fought itself to primacy over the other animals of the Wild. The spell of the cub's heritage was upon him, the fear and the respect born of the centuries of struggle and the accumulated experience of the generations. Had he been full-grown, he would have run away. As it was, he cowered down in a paralysis of fear, already half proffering the submission that his kind had proffered from the first time a wolf came in to sit by man's fire and be made warm.

One of the Indians arose and walked over to him and stooped above him. The cub cowered closer to the ground. It was the unknown bending over him and reaching down to seize hold of him. His hair bristled involuntarily; his lips writhed back and his little fangs were bared. The hand, poised like doom above him, hesitated and a man spoke, laughing, "Wabam wabisca ip pit tah." ("Look! The white fangs!").
Choose the best word or group of words to fit the passage and tick your choices.

The central character in the extract is
a) a wolf cub. □ a man cub. □ an Indian brave. □ a hunter. □

The story describes his feelings of
b) glee □ uncertainty □ frustration □ power □ when, for the first time, he

c) left his cave. □ swam in the stream. □ went into the forest. □ saw humans. □

Look at the first paragraph.

Find and copy two words that show the cub had been to the pool before.

... trotted in amongst the trees.

What does the word trotted tell us about how the cub was feeling?

Tick one.
He was surprised. □
He was careless. □
He was carefree. □
He was tired. □

How did the cub first become aware of the group of men?

Tick two.
They appeared suddenly outside his cave. □ He had a dream about them. □
He found them where he did not expect to. □ He picked up their scent. □
He woke up and one was poised above him. □ He realised they were watching him, silently. □
5  ... five live things ...
Why does the writer use this phrase to describe the men?
Tick one.
to show that the Indians were alive, not dead because they sat so still they were like statues to show that the cub did not know what they were because they did not behave like animals

6  The spell of the cub's heritage was upon him ...
What does this mean?
Tick one.
What happened in the past had influence over him now.
He could not remember everything that happened in the past.
What happened in the past was legend, not fact.
He could not control what happened in the past.

7  Why did the cub not run away when he first saw the men?
Tick one.
He was too tired to move.
He wanted to sit by the fire.
He thought the men might feed him.
He was overwhelmed by his thoughts.

8  By not running away, how is the cub's behaviour similar to the first wolf that sat by man's fire?
In both cases ...
Tick one.
the wolves wanted to be friendly with the Indians.
the wolves recognised man's superiority.
the wolves did not know about man's power.
the wolves needed to prove their bravery.
9. Put ticks to show which statements are true and which are false.

10. Which of the following sentences best summarises the last paragraph?

Tick one.

- The Indian was determined to capture the cub.
- The cub was pleased to meet the Indian.
- The cub’s reactions made the Indian laugh.
- The Indian was frightened by the cub’s fangs.

11. Put these events in order by numbering them from 1 to 5.

The cub …

- was scared by the approach of a human.
- was overcome by thoughts and feelings.

Lost Without It

Imagine trying to live in a world dominated by dihydrogen oxide. This is a compound* that has no taste or smell and is so variable in its properties that it is generally benign but at other times swiftly lethal. Depending on its state, it can scald you or freeze you. In the presence of certain organic molecules it can form acids so nasty that they can strip the leaves from trees and eat the faces off statuary. In bulk, when agitated, it can strike with a fury that no human edifice could withstand. Even for those who have learned to live with it, it is an often murderous substance. We call it water.

Water is everywhere. A potato is 80 per cent water, a cow 74 per cent, a bacterium 75 per cent. A tomato, at 95 per cent, is little but water. Even humans are 65 per cent water, making us more liquid than solid by a margin of almost two to one. Water is strange stuff. It is formless and transparent and yet we long to be beside it. It has no taste and yet we love the taste of it. We will travel great distances and pay small fortunes to see it in sunshine. And even though we know it is dangerous and drowns tens of thousands of people every year, we can’t wait to frolic in it. Because water is so ubiquitous we tend to overlook what an extraordinary substance it is. I hardly need point out that we would be lost without it.

* In science, a compound is something made by combining two or more elements.
1. What is dihydrogen oxide?

Tick two.
- an imaginary substance
- a tasteless compound
- a lethal element
- poison
- an acid
- water

2. Look at the text in the box below.

Underline two words that show that dihydrogen oxide can be deadly.

Imagine trying to live in a world dominated by dihydrogen oxide. 3. Depending on its state...

What does this tell us about dihydrogen oxide?

Tick one.
- that it is always moving
- that it can be found in different areas
- that it can take different forms
- that it is normally safe

4. Look at the first paragraph.

Which of the following best describes the acids mentioned in the text?

Tick one.
- polluted
- hygienic
- decaying
- destructive
5
We call it water.

What is the intended effect of this sentence?

Tick one.

to surprise the reader to worry the reader to stress the dangers to cause confusion

6
According to the text, for what do people pay small fortunes?

Tick one.

keeping fit and healthy insurance protection against drought travel insurance
going on summer holidays

Look at the text in the box below.

Underline three words or phrases that might make water seem dull and unexciting.

Home Truths?

Well-meaning but misinformed people think animals in the wild are “happy” because they are “free”. They imagine this wild animal roaming about the savannah on digestive walks after eating a prey that accepted its lot piously. They imagine this animal overseeing its offspring proudly and tenderly, the whole family watching the setting of the sun from the limbs of trees with sighs of pleasure. Then it is captured by wicked men and thrown into tiny jails. Its “happiness” is dashed. It yearns mightily for “freedom” and does all it can to escape. Being denied its “freedom” for too long, the animal becomes a shadow of itself, its spirit broken. So some people imagine.

That is not the way it is.

Animals are territorial. That is the key to their minds. Only a familiar territory will allow them to fulfil the two relentless imperatives of the wild: the avoidance of enemies and the getting of food and water. A biologically sound zoo enclosure – whether cage, pit, moated island, aviary or aquarium – is just another territory, peculiar only in its size and in its proximity to human territory. In a zoo, we do for animals what we have done for ourselves with houses: we bring together in a small space what in the wild is spread out. Now the river flows through taps at hand’s reach and we can wash next to where we sleep, we can eat where we have cooked, and we can surround the whole with a protective wall and keep it clean and warm. A house is a compressed territory where our basic needs can be fulfilled close by and safely. A sound zoo enclosure is the equivalent for an animal. It finds within it all the places it needs – a lookout, a place for resting, for eating and drinking, for bathing, for grooming etc. – and finds that there is no need to go hunting, food appearing six days a week.

One might even argue that if an animal could choose with intelligence, it would opt for living in a zoo. Think about it yourself. Would you rather be put up at The Ritz* with free room service and unlimited access to a doctor or be homeless without a soul to care for you?

1. Which of the following best describes this text?
   Tick one.
   - fictional narrative
   - factual information
   - opinion and argument
   - instructions and advice

2. What message is conveyed in this text?
   Tick one.
   - All animals need to be properly cared for.
   - Animals are more comfortable in the wild.
   - Zoos are best.
   - No-one really knows what is best for animals.

3. In the first paragraph, the narrator describes an imagined wild animal family. Where does the family relax?
   Tick one.
   - at the foot of a tree
   - on the branches of trees
   - on a rock in the sunset
   - in a shady haven

4. What is the narrator’s view of life in a zoo?
   Tick one.
   - It is like being in a tiny jail.
   - Life is easier than in the wild.
   - Animals are happy to be close to humans.
   - Animals become dispirited.

5. “… animals in the wild are “happy” because they are “free”.
   What does the narrator think about people who believe this?
   Tick two.
   - that they have a good understanding of animal welfare issues
   - that they have an idealised view of nature
   - that they can see both sides of the argument
   - that they realise the importance of exercise for wild animals
   - that they do not understand the difficulties animals face living in the wild

Underline the phrase that shows that some animals in the wild expect to be eaten by others.

They imagine this wild animal roaming about the savannah on digestive walks after eating a prey that accepted its lot piously. They imagine this animal overseeing its offspring proudly and tenderly, the whole family watching the setting of the sun from the limbs of trees with sighs of pleasure.

That is not the way it is.

What is the effect of this single sentence paragraph?

Tick two.

It highlights that everything that went before it is not true.

It is meant to separate the animal perspective from the human one.

It shows that the narrator is feeling defensive.

It has more impact because it stands on its own.

It separates the text to show two sides of the argument.

It is there to introduce the true facts.

What does the narrator say are the main challenges for animals living in the wild?

Tick two.

keeping control of their territory

avoiding captivity

protecting themselves from predators making sure they exercise enough maintaining an adequate diet

living alongside humans

What does the narrator see as the advantages of living in a compressed territory?

Tick two.

You can do whatever you want.

Everything you need is convenient.

It is near to friendly neighbours.

It is safe.

It has proper plumbing.

There are so many places to explore.
10 Think about the narrator’s viewpoint. Put ticks to show whether the narrator would agree or disagree with the following statements.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>The narrator would</th>
<th>agree</th>
<th>disagree</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Animals need to have freedom to be happy.</td>

<td>Living in a zoo is like living in a top quality hotel.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Animals in the wild have no-one to look after them.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

11 ... we do for animals what we have done for ourselves ...

What does this tell us about the narrator’s assumptions?

Tick two.

- He thinks animals have the same values and needs as humans.
- He feels all living creatures deserve to have a roof over their heads.
- He thinks animals really want to live in the wild.

- He feels only humans know the correct way to live.
- He thinks zoos fulfil the same role for animals as houses do for humans.
- He believes that humans are the masters of all animals.

12 Put ticks to show which of the following statements are fact and which are opinion.
